

Dream Revelations of a Young Canadian Believer

December 30th, 2012

...Well I was at work but in this wood lodge place and then work finished and my family was there too but then all of a sudden Satan showed up... like the witch does in Rapunzel in the Disney movie, like a slow glow that gets larger and larger. He looked like an evil Chinese emperor/dragon and he was riding a dragon or part dragon and there were dragons and other creatures with him. He started to throw fire and /blow fire on things, flames and descending heat storms started falling everywhere.....

...Then God showed up and everyone who believed in God said that they had to stick with the Almighty because he can overcome Satan's the true king over everything but God didn't do anything... like he "blowed snow" on Satan to distract him temporarily but he didn't harm him or get rid of him.

People's faith started to shake. Then these big black creatures almost appearing like Bigfoot, not all were black, but they started climbing on things and grabbing people and were torturing them/raping them. It was around this time that I was grabbed by them and they tortured me. I just remember the feeling of utter horror, terror, and despair because you couldn't get out of it.

And then i woke up and was telling someone about it and then I woke up again. A dream within a dream....

When I got tortured it wasn't like I was going to get tortured it was more like I was thinking, I could end up getting tortured... and then I got a taste of it.

This was a lot more visual. I couldn't open my eyes, my heart was racing, everything was very vivid. So there were thousands of these fire trails that looked like snakes and were moving insanely fast; if you looked closely, it was made up of thousands/millions of horsemen on fire and they were rampaging/pillaging through the hills and cities...

Soon thereafter, these fire dragon things flying around directing the snake trails of fire, there were earthquakes all over and then these creatures jumped out of where the earth cracked and they looked like the Predators from the sci-fi movies, they were insanely strong/fast and did these huge leaps and jumps in the air... they were racing through the cities blowing fire and had fire in their hands and tearing through people/grabbing people. Then there were these lizard snake things that began jumping out of nowhere and attacking people.

The scenery was epic and horrifying all at once, almost like the war scenes where they're creating those monsters in the dungeon pit prior to war in the Lord of the Rings

There was so much fire, everything was black. No sun. I'm not even copying this out of the bible unless my subconscious is but it was really vivid. It then felt like there was no god, He wasn't there anymore. You could feel through all the torturing everyone just wanted to give up and renounce whatever so they could be free but then I realized that maybe we feel this despair/complete lack of God right now as a preparation because when that all comes, it will be a million times worse.....you have to be able to stand strong and deny him or else you'll be in hell with those things.